

Courtesy of The Angler's Boutique Resort

The Angler's Boutique Resort, Miami, FL

Check out the Mediterranean Revival Angles in the Art Deco District

by Jen Karetnick | February 01, 2010

So much about Miami, and South Beach in particular, is new, cutting-edge and trendy that sometimes it's almost difficult to remember the history here. That's not the case at The Angler's Boutique Resort, which opened in 2007 as a unique enclave of four renovated Mediterranean Revival buildings and a gorgeous street-side restaurant, 660 at The Angler's, with romantic banquette seating. The Angler's was actually the last historic property on South Beach have its potential completely realized, but it was surely worth the wait.

And that's not just for the design, but for the loving care performed by owners Marc and Eric Lawrence and their staff, including Chef Giorgio Rapicavoli, who offers such decadent treats as Crispy Braised Pork Belly with maple, sweet potato, pecans, smoked oil and sea salt; Olive Oil Poached Piquillo Peppers with goat cheese, crispy baguette and sea salt; and Twelve Hour Braised Short Ribs with porcini and truffle risotto and port wine reduction—all to be washed down with "Strawberry Blonde" Bellinis. Karen Brown, VP of Marketing for Boutique Hospitality Management that manages the property, says, "We are steadfast in our approach to personalized, sincere guest service and value for the price paid. In today's economy, not only do guests desire and expect a fantastic experience but there is also a personal level that we try to connect on with each guest that we feel sets us apart."

That philosophy rings true especially for the Cupid-worthy Destination: Romance package, which features (in either a duplex with Jacuzzi, $499 per night or villa, $699 per night, both for three nights minimum) a welcome bottle of champagne and chocolate covered strawberries; Continental breakfast for two in bed each morning; one dinner for two, valued at $150, which includes a choice of lobster, steak and fresh fish as well as mouth-watering desserts like the D.I.Y. S'mores: Caramelized Graham Cracker, Housemade Marshmallow, and Valrhona Chocolate or the Warm Nutella Fondue: with Long Stemmed Strawberries, Baby Bananas, and Salted Crostini; and two beach chairs and umbrellas each day.

Mediterranean Revival has never felt so good. For more information, visit www.theanglersresort.com.